STATE OF MAINE.

Bangor, Oct 3, 1841. HE undersigned hereby gives miblic notice that the settling land in the inflowing described Townships, which has been surveyed into settling lots, and belonging to the state, is now in the mar-

Township No. 4, Range 5, West from the East line of the State No. 5. No. 10, No. 11. No. 12. No. 13, Letter F, Letter H.

The prices for hand in these Townships will vary according to the situation and quality of the lets not less however than fifty cents, and probably not exceeding one dollar per acye.

The land will be sold upon a credit of four yearly payments, with interest, the three first-payments to e expended in labor on the roads in the Township where the land sold is situated, under the direction of the Land Agent, and the last payment to be in cash-Each purchaser will be required by the terms of his deed, within said four years to build a house on his ot and to clear in a proper manner lifteen sacres, ten or more of which shall be laid down to grass,

Whenever twenty, or a less number of persons shall give a satisfactory bond-to-the-Land Agent, that they will within three years erect a substantial Saw and Grist Mill in any Township lotted for settlers, having no mills in said Township, each of said persons will be entitled to a leed of one lot of land. subject to the performance of the settling duties above mentioned, and the Company will be entitled to a deed of the mill lot.

Not more than four lots will be sold to any one berson in any township artifact The Arcostook Road has been completed this Year, to the Aroostook River, and as that river is navigable for boats, a good communication is now opened to the settler for an easy access to each of the above mentioned Townships.

Saw and Grist Mills have been erected and are now in operation in Township Letter F, Range 2. No. 9, Range 4, and No. 11, Range 5; and contracts have been made for the erection of Mills, the ensuing year, in Township No. 9. Range 6, No. 11, Range o, and in Letter D. Range 1.

There has been a steady demand for settling land through the season, and more lots have been sold than in any former year. As the United States have recently established a post near the mouth of the Aroestook, and another at the mouth of Fish River, and have sent a Company of soldiers to each, new roads will undoubtedly be soon opened through this neotion of the State, mail routes established, new markets opened for produce, and the settler will feel additional security from any border difficulty. With the known fertility of the soil, the advantage of good roads and mills, and the rapid settlement of this part of the State, it is believed that a most favorable opportunity is now offered to young men who wish to become farmers, to secure themselves good locations, where in a few years, with industry and enonomy, they cannot fail to secure to themselves an honorable competency. Land Agent of Maine. Movements in favor of Home Industry --The Beneats of the joint action of the Government and the People.

It is very gratifying to notice more than a common interest in the success of the agricultural, and manufacturing interests of the country. A large convention favorable to the protection of Home Industry has lately been held in New York, and strong ground taken in-favor of protection, by establishing duties in offset to those laid upon our productions by foreign? nations. Efforts are now making in the country to get up a National Agricultural Convention at Washington, in Becember next, to consult upon the general good of that department of national industry, and to recommend and arge upon Congress such measures as shall be deemed efficient. Men's minds in all parts of the country, east, west, north and south, are becoming interested in the subject of promoting the industral power of the people. It begins to be understood the Provinces at the South are tranquit that while other nations are enforcing systems to strengthen and extend their home industry, a necessity is thereby had upon our government "Didn't I see you walking up the street with to protect our home industry, by countervailing a young lady yesterday, William?" said Anna duties. . duties.

And is it not time that the government should adopt some permanent and efficient system to cands us annually ten millions of dollars worth of woolen manufactures to clothe us, and yet til after you had passed the store I was in, and will not take a pound of our wool, even if we then I could not see her face." had it to spare. She sends us about three millions of dollars worth of steel, which, if our people would be true to themselves, and our wayernment suifably encourage them, might be manafactured in the United Status. She sends us a vast amount of other articles, and preaches finely to us of the vast advantages of letting her know. supply as, while she carefully guards her own interests by refusing to take anything from us that she can contrive to get along without. And while our people would scorn to take her purely Tellitical theories as a guide, many of them are found to adopt, at once, her political economical doctrines, without question or reluctance, alw though England violates them every hour!

He time, we believe, is rapidly approaching, when the productive classes in our country, and all who are interested in the prosperity of the country will demand, as a matter of paramount importance, in spite of the croakings of political demagogues, that the powers of the government shall be exercised in fostering the industry of the country by legal enactments. The thin air bubbles of modern free trade - free on our part and restricted every where else, will be exploded, and an actual reciprosity of trade be demanded. The sooner this period arrives the better. Demagogues have had the lead of the popular mind on this subject until the practical effects are rapidly impoverishing the country. This is fast being perceived by the popular mind and-a-radical-change will be demanded and ob-

While it is the duty of the government to afford its protection to home industry, it is no lessthe duty of the people to support with vigor and call Caroline Murry genteel, and you don t j so decisiveness, the government in its undertaking. There must be no indifference in the matter no possibility of the wants and the wishes of th people, in regard to it, being misunderstood.

And intimately connected with the action of the government, is the popular Kelmig, the previling fushion as to the attachment to foreign and domestic manufactures. There ought to be a palcietic attachment to our own productions. instead of a miserable hankering after something foreign. Domestic goods should be prized and made fashionable, and must be, if we would have our country free and prosperous, and the manufacture of rich goods of worsted, wool and ailk introduced and sustained in our country.

If such manufactures are ever to arrive at gicater perfection; if they are to be enabled to vie with the old world, with the accumulated ing to associate, or be seen in the street with capitals and cheapness of tabor, they must be nuclured and cherished at home. This would condition of a hireling. And besides this, when ever she was invited to balls or parties, she never the condition of a hireling. be the most judicious course. Let us all unite as the heart of one man, in the resolution, to prefer, and use nothing but the work of our hands, and the business will be completed; we have the power to say it shall be done. This, with the just, comprehensive and steady action of the government, will give prosperity to the industry of our nation, and secure us a national greatness sulpassing all present anticipations. It will not only work a revolution of lasting benefit to all classes in our own country, but have an influence in Europe, of good to man.

or If we hear any good news from the New York election, it shall be forth-coming. It now looks pretty much like the handle of a jug, all on one side, and confound it all that side belongs to the opposition '

The former was completely routed, and escaped with 100 men closey pursued by the Government troops, and is supposed to have been taken. "Indeed! and you don't associate with her be cause she is not genteel. Well, if I am any judge of gentility, Anna, Caroline Murry is about as genteel and ladylike as any girl I know of always excepting, of course, my own dear Here ensued a pause, and her brother said "Well, why don't they associate with her, Cannot I induce you to comply with my wish. Anna? I hope she has not been guilty of unntoner or immortal conduct.

"O, no! nothing of that. I never heard the slightest reflection on her character," replied the sister. "But then, genteel young ladies don't work in the kitchen, like hired servants, and she dors. And, besides this, call on her when you will, and she is always doing something. Why, lam told that she has even been seen at the chamber windows, fronting on the public street, with her head tied up, sweeping and making the heds! And Clarissa Sprigler says that she saw her once, with the parlor windows open, sweeping and dusting like a servant! Nobody is go er would stay later than ten or eleven o'clock, which every one knows to be vulgar. Somebody had to go home with her of course; and the choicest beau in the company was almost sure to have his good nature and his politeness taxed for this purpose. Once I heard her say that she considered the theatre an unfit place for any young lady; she offended the whole company, and has never been invited to a party among genteel people since. "And is this all?" said William Enfield taking a long breath.

"Yes, and I should think that was enough, in

"But seriously, William, you cannot be in earnest:

" And seriously, Anna, are you in entnest?" " Of course I am."

"Well, sister, I'm afraid my old fashioned notions, for such I suppose you will call them, and your new fangled notions; for such I must call sed; in comparison with the young ladges just them, will not chime well together. All that I called upon; but in neatness and all that constihave heard-you allege against Caroline_Murry, raises, instead of lowers her in my estimation So far as a genteel and truly hady-like deportment is concerned, I think her greatly superior to the two friends you have named as pinks of

Anna looked up into the face of her brother for some moments, her countenance exhibiting a mingled expression of surprise and disappoint

But seriously, Anna, I do not consider that those young ladies have any very strong claims to gentility; and, like you, I do not wish to associate with those who are not genteel.

"If you talk in that way, William, I shall get angry with you lean not hear my most intimate friends spoken of so lightly; and at the same time accused of a want of gentility. You of the three young ladies we called upon this must remember that you are reflecting upon your sisters's associates.

"You must not, and I know you will not get angry with me for speaking plainly and you must do me the justice to believe that in speakmuskets, 70,000 ball cartridges, 200 lances, 3 ing as I do, I am in earnest. call with ine and see Miss Murry

"I cannot do that, William," she replied in a positive tone.

-- And why not, Anna?" "I have already told you.'

"I can not perceive the force of that reason, Anna. But, if you will not go with me, I must decline going with you. The society of Miss Murry can not be more repulsive to you, than is scribed by a certain circle in which false pride, that of the Misses Eberly and Fitzwilliams to instead of principle, was the governing motive, come, now, sister, let us both be rational to each unworthy would have sought in vain for admisother. I am willing to go with you, if you will sion, and in those circles she shone as a bright go with me."

"Yes, but William, you don't reflect that in doing as you desire me, I will be in danger of losing my present positron in society. Caroline Murry is not estecimed gentrel in the circle in which I move, and if it should be known that I visit her, I will be considered on a level with her. I would do any thing to oblige you, but, indeed, I would be risking too much here.

'You would only be breaking,' replied the brother, from the slavery you are now in to false notions of what is truly genteel. If any one esteems you less for being kind, attentive, and courteous, to one against whom suspicion has never dared to breathe a word, and whose whole life is a bright example of the pure and hightoned principles that govern her, that one is unworthy of your regard. True gentility does not consist, my sister, merely in a studied and artificial elegance of behaviour, but in inward purity, and taste, and a true sense of what is right. all exhibiting themselves in their natural external expression. The real lady judges of others from what they are, and neglects none but the wilfully deprayed. True, there are distinctions in society, and there are lines of social demarkation, and all this is right. But we should be careful into what social sphere we are drawn, and how we suffer ourselves to be influenced by the false notions of real worth which prevail in some circles that profess a high degree of gentility. I hold that every one, no matter what may be his or her condition in life, fails to act a true part if not engaged in doing something that is useful. Let me put it to vour natural good sense, which do you think the most deserving of praise, Caroline Murray, who spends her time in 'doing something' useful to her family; or your friends, the Misses Eberly and Fitzwilliams, and those constituting their particular circle, who expect service from others, but never think of rendering any, and who carry their prejudices Anna did not reply, and her brother said

I am in earnest, sister, when I say, that you cannot confer a greater favor upon your brother than to go with him to see Caroline Murray

"I will go," she replied to this appeal, and then hurned away, evidently no little disturbed in her

In half an hour she was ready, and, taking her brother's arm, was soon on the way to Miss Ernestine Eberle's residence. That young lady received them with all the graces and fashionable airs she could assume, and entertained them with the idle gossip of the day, interspersed with an occasional spice of envious and ill-natured remark. Knowing that her brother was a close discriminator, and that he was by no means prepossessed in her friend's favor, Anna herself observed her more narrowly, and as it were with hia eyea. It seemed to her that Miss Eberle never was so uninteresting, or so malapropos in what she said. The call on Zepherine Fitzwilliams came next in turn. Scanning her also with other eyes than her own, Anna was disappointed in ner very dear friend. She looked through her, and was pained to see that there was a hollowness and want of any thing like true strength or excellence of character about her. Particularly was she displeased with a gratuitous sneer thrown out at the expense of Caroline Murry.

And now with a reluctance which she could not overcome, Anna turned with her brother towards the residence of the young lady who had lost caste because she had good sense and was industrions.

."I know my sister's lady-like character will prompt her to right action, in commext coll," said the brother, looking into Anna's face, with an enecouraging amile. ... She did not reply; yet she felt somehow o other pleased with the remark. A few minutes walk brought them to the door, and they were presently ushered into a parlor in which was the young lady they were seeking. She sat near a window, and was se wing. She was plainly drestutes the lady in air and appearance, in every way their superior.

"I believe you know my sister," said Enfield, on presenting Anna.

"We have met a few times," she replied, with a picturat imembarraned emile, extending at the same time her hand. Miss Enfield took the proffered hand with less reluctance than she had imagined she should, but a few hours before. Somehow or other, Caroline seemed to her much changed for the better in manner and appearance. And she could not help, during all the visit, drawing contrasts between her and the two very dear friends she had just called upon; and the contrast was in no day morning, and at 3 o'clock fired a salute of was on topics of ordinary interest, but did not from the Public Square. "Well, we won't talk any more about it just | that Caroline ultered, and this was so apparent now, for it will be of no use," said the easter, to Anna, that she could not help rioticing and changing her voice and manner; and so I will involuntarily approving it.
